STILL WHITE

$18 Semillon California (Napa Valley)

Forlorn Hope, "NACRE", 2014

The fruit for our 2014 Nacré was hand-picked and pressed whole cluster, and underwent spontaneous/native fermentation in stainless steel. Racked off lees at the completion of ferment, the wine was bottled in June of 2016 in order to allow the significant portion of the wine's aging and development to occur under cork. To this end, it was aged six+ years in bottle prior to its release. The Nacré is produced in the same fashion as the Sémillons of Australia's Hunter Valley and is capable of decades of aging

$17 Chardonnay California (Central Coast)
Greg Brewer, Diatom, 2024

The nose is vivid and pure: exotic citrus, minty herbs, oyster shell, honeydew rind, lime candy, and a whisper of sea spray. On the palate, it is sleek and taut — ripe pear, ginger, pomelo, and brisk lime zest coiled around a mouthwatering thread of acidity. Salinity and minerals run through the finish alongside springtime blossoms and a lingering kick of melon pith. It gains weight and richness with time in the glass without ever losing its electric freshness.

Monte Rio Cellars, Côt, 2023

Monte Rio Cellars Côt (the traditional Loire Valley name for Malbec) from Lodi, California, is a lighter, food-friendly take on the grape inspired by Old World style rather than heavy, modern styles.
